EnQuest Energy Services Corp. ("EnQuest" or the "Company", "ENQ") is pleased to announce the launch of a wholly owned subsidiary, Gateway Distribution Services Inc. (Gateway) to provide materials distribution, railway transload and related trucking services from strategically located facilities.

Mr. David Murray CEO of EnQuest stated, "We are excited about our new Gateway division. It fits exceptionally well with our overall strategy for the development of North American energy services business and augments our existing OCTG operations in the United States. Our company's growth will occur through organic development and the acquisition of mature companies within EnQuest's market focus."

Dawson Creek, BC has been selected for Gateway's entry into the market and is scheduled to begin immediately. The facility will be operational early in July and in time to support summer drilling programs scheduled for the region. Industry support to launch this operation has been provided by oil and gas and pipe distribution companies. The onsite rail spur is connected to a North American network. Products can be transferred to and from rail, truck or containers. The materials handled include: steel, tubular, dry bulk and downhole stimulation products, access matting, equipment and more. Regional transportation services will be provided by affiliated trucking companies who have the expertise to transport these cargos.

The new Dawson Creek facility is ideally situated to support resource based activities in north eastern British Columbia, Foothills and the Peace River Arch regions. The location is ideally situated for supply chain management purposes with easy access for materials originating in North America, by major highways and railway or from Asia through the ports of Vancouver and Prince Rupert. In addition, Gateway is investigating additional locations for development purposes.
